

The Participants

 Linda Bosniak, professor of law at Rutgers University, received a B.A. from Wesleyan University, an M.A. from the University of California at Berkeley, and a J.D. from Stanford Law School. Her research interests focus on the subjects of immigration, citizenship, equality, and nationalism in law and in political theory. In 2003-2004, she was acting director of Rutgers University's Center for the Critical Analysis of Contemporary Culture, where she led a year-long faculty seminar on the subject of "Citizenship." She served as faculty fellow and visiting professor at the Program on Law and Public Affairs at Princeton University in 2001-2002. Professor Bosniak is currently at work on a book entitled The Citizen and the Alien: Dilemmas of Contemporary Membership (Princeton University Press, forthcoming).

 Peter Brimelow, editor of VDARE.com, is the author of Alien Nation: Common Sense About America's Immigration Disaster. He is a senior fellow at the Pacific Research Institute, and a columnist for CBS MarketWatch. He holds a B.A. from the University of Sussex and an M.B.A. from Stanford University. He is author of The Wall Street Gurus: How You Can Profit from Investment Newsletters (1986), The Patriot Game: Canada and the Canadian Question Revisited (1986), Alien Nation: Common Sense About America's Immigration Disaster, (1995) and The Worm In The Apple: How The Teacher Unions Are Destroying American Education (2003).

 Steven Camarota is the research director for the Center for Immigration Studies, an independent research organization founded in 1985. A think tank devoted exclusively to research and policy analysis of the economic, social, demographic, fiscal, and other impacts of immigration on the United States, its mission is to expand the base of public knowledge and understanding of the need for an immigration policy that gives first concern to the broad national interest.

 Elizabeth Cohen, assistant professor of political science at the Maxwell School of Citizenship and Public Affairs at Syracuse University, received a B.A. from Swarthmore College and Ph.D. from Yale University. Her research interests focus on modern political theory, citizenship studies, and the politics of immigration. Her publications address children's citizenship, immigration, asylum, migration policy, LGBT marriage, the civil disabilities of felons and ex-felons, and citizenship in the European Union. Currently she is completing a book entitled The Myth of Full Citizenship: a Comparative Study of Semi-Citizenship in Democratic Polities that analyzes divisions in types of formal citizenship and the ways in which both citizens and states exploit these divisions.

 Amitai Etzioni, University Professor and director of the Institute for Communitarian Policy Studies at The George Washington University, earned his Ph.D. in sociology from the University of California at Berkeley. He has been chair of the sociology department at Columbia University, a guest scholar at the Brookings Institution, a senior advisor to the White House, and the Thomas Henry Carroll Ford Foundation Professor at the Harvard Business School. He served as president of the American Sociological Association and was the founding president of the international Society for the Advancement of Socio-Economics. In 1990, he founded the Communitarian Network, a not-for-profit, non-partisan organization dedicated to shoring up the moral, social and political foundations of society. He is the author of twenty-four books, including The Monochrome Society (2001), My Brother's Keeper: A Memoir and a Message (2003), and From Empire to Community: A New Approach to International Relations (2004).

 Tamar Jacoby, a senior fellow at the Manhattan Institute, writes extensively on immigration, citizenship, ethnicity and race. She is a graduate of Yale University and author of Someone Else's House: America's Unfinished Struggle for Integration (1998), and Reinventing the Melting Pot: The New Immigrants and What It Means To Be American (2004). Formerly a senior writer and justice editor for Newsweek, she was confirmed in 2004 by the U.S. Senate to serve on the National Council for the Humanities. Her essays have been published in a variety of periodicals, including The New York Times, The Wall Street Journal, The Washington Post, The Financial Times, The Los Angeles Times, The New Republic, National Review, The Weekly Standard, Commentary, The New York Review of Books, Dissent and Foreign Affairs.

 Jane Junn, associate professor of political science at Rutgers University and the Eagleton Institute of Politics received an A.B. from the University of Michigan and Ph.D. from the University of Chicago. Her research interests focus on political participation and elections in the U.S., political behavior and attitudes among American minorities and immigrants, theories of democracy, survey research, and social science methodology. Her book, Education and Democratic Citizenship in America (with Norman Nie and Ken Stehlik-Barry) won the 1997 Woodrow Wilson Foundation Book Award from the American Political Science Association for the best book published in political science in 1996. Her other publications include: Civic Education: What Makes Students Learn (1998) with Richard Niemi; "Assimilating or Coloring Participation? Gender, Race, and Democratic Political Participation" in Women Transforming Politics (1997), and "The Political Assimilation of Immigrants and Ethnic Minorities in the U.S." in The American Behavioral Scientist (1999). She is currently at work on a book on race, diversity and immigration in the United States.

 Philip Kasinitz holds a joint professorship in sociology at Hunter College and the CUNY Graduate Center. He serves as chair of the program in sociology at CUNY and is associate director of the CUNY Center for Urban Research. He received a B.A. from Boston University and Ph.D. from New York University. He writes on urban life, race and ethnicity, and international migration. He is the author of Caribbean New York: Black Immigrants and the Politics of Race (1992), editor of Metropolis: Center and Symbol of Our Time (1995), co-editor (with Josh DeWind and Charles Hirschman) of the Handbook on International Migration (1999), and (with John Mollenkopf and Mary C. Waters) Becoming New Yorkers: Ethnographies of the New Second Generation (2004). He has served as chair of the ASA's International Migration section and as council member of the ASA section on Community and Urban Sociology. He is a member of the Social Science Research Council's Committee on International Migration, the Historical Advisory Committee of the Statue of Liberty - Ellis Island Foundation, and the Russell Sage Foundation's Committee to study the Social Impacts of the events of September 11 on New York City. In addition to academic journals, his work has appeared in Dissent, The Nation, The City Journal, Newsday, The Wall Street Journal, Culturefront, Commonquest and Lingua Franca.

 Stephen Macedo, Laurence S. Rockefeller Professor of Politics, is director of Princeton University's Center for Human Values. His publications range across the fields of political theory, ethics, American constitutionalism, and public policy, with an emphasis on liberalism and its critics, and the roles of schools, civil society, and public policy in shaping citizens. He is author of Diversity and Distrust: Civic Education in a Multicultural Democracy (2000); Liberal Virtues: Citizenship, Virtue, and Community in Liberal Constitutionalism (1990); and The New Right v. The Constitution (1987). His essay, "Homosexuality and the Conservative Mind," (Georgetown Law Review, December 1995), won the Fred L. Berger prize of the American Philosophical Association. Among his edited volumes are Reassessing the Sixties: Debating the Political and Cultural Legacy (1997), Deliberative Politics: Essays on Democracy and Disagreement (1999), and Moral and Political Education, NOMOS XLIII, co-edited with Yael Tamir, (2001). He is co-editor, with Walter F. Murphy, James E. Fleming, and Sotirios A. Barber, of American Constitutional Interpretation, 3rd ed. (2002).

 Ken Masugi is director of the Center for Local Government, which attempts to apply the principles of the American founding to the theory and practice of local government. He served as special assistant to then-Chairman Clarence Thomas of the U.S.

Equal Employment Opportunity Commission and has held visiting university appointments including the Olin Distinguished Visiting Professor at the U.S. Air Force Academy. He is co-author with Brian Janiskee of Democracy in California: Politics and Government in the Golden State (2002) and co-editor of six books on political thought, including The Supreme Court and American Constitutionalism with Branford P. Wilson (1997); The Ambiguous Legacy of the Enlightenment with William Rusher (1995); The American Founding with J. Jackson Barlow and Leonard W. Levy (1988). He is the editor of Interpreting Tocqueville's Democracy in America (1991).

 Lina Newton, assistant professor of political science at Hunter College, received a B.A. from Wesleyan University and Ph.D. from the University of California, Irvine. Her research interests focus on recent changes in U.S. immigration policy and its effects on immigrants of Mexican origin, American politics, U.S. immigration policy, public policy and minority politics. Most recently she has analyzed how elected officials employed imagery and mythology in rallying support for immigrant legalization and border controls. She is the author of “Why Latinos Supported Proposition 187: Testing the Economic Threat and Cultural Identity Hypotheses” which appeared in Social Science Quarterly. Her narrative analysis of immigration policymaking from 1981-1996 will appear in Helen Ingram and Anne Schneider eds., Deserving and Entitled, Social Constructions and Public Policy (SUNY Press).

 Noah Pickus is associate director of the Kenan Institute for Ethics at Duke University and adjunct associate professor of public policy at the Sanford Institute of Public Policy. He earned his B.A. from Wesleyan University and Ph.D. from Princeton University. His scholarly interests focus on normative and policy issues concerning citizenship and nationalism. He has written on a variety of issues including immigration, ethics and public policy, and innovation and economic development. His publications include Immigration and Citizenship in the 21st Century (1998) and True Faith and Allegiance: Immigration and American Civic Nationalism (2005). He currently serves as senior policy advisor to the Arbor Group, consultants to innovation-driven companies and communities, is a board member of the Institute of Forest Biotechnology and the Program in Cross-Sectoral Public Policy, and is a program committee member for the Oak Ridge Center for Advanced Studies.

 Peter Skerry, professor of political science at Boston College, is a nonresident senior fellow at the Brookings Institution, where his research focuses on social policy, racial and ethnic politics, and immigration. He serves on the editorial board of American Politics Research and on the board of advisory editors of Society magazine. He is also a member of the Advisory Council on European/Transatlantic Issues at the Heinrich Böll Foundation of Bündnis 90/Die Grünen (the German Green Party). His articles have appeared in Society, Publius, The Journal of Policy History, The New Republic, Slate, The Public Interest, The Wilson Quarterly, National Review, and others. His book, Mexican Americans: The Ambivalent Minority, was awarded the 1993 Los Angeles Times Book Prize. His most recent book is Counting on the Census? Race, Group Identity, and the Evasion of Politics. His current project is a study of the social, cultural, and political integration of Muslims and Arabs in the United States.

 Rogers Smith, Christopher H. Browne Distinguished Professor, is chair of the department of political science at the University of Pennsylvania. His research focuses on American constitutional law and American political thought, with special interests in issues of citizenship and racial, gender, and class inequalities. He has published over 90 essays in academic journals, edited volumes and public interest publications, including the American Political Science Review, the Western Political Quarterly, Studies in American Political Development, Daedalus, Social Research, Yale Law Journal, the American Prospect, and The Nation. He is author or co-author of five books: Stories of Peoplehood: The Politics and Morals of Political Memberships (2003); The Unsteady March: The Rise and Decline of Racial Equality in America (with Philip A. Klinkner, 1999); Civic Ideals: Conflicting Visions of Citizenship in U.S. History (1997), which was a finalist for the 1998 Pulitzer Prize in history; Citizenship without Consent: The Illegal Alien in the American Polity (with Peter H. Schuck, 1985); and Liberalism and American Constitutional Law (1985, rev. ed.1990).

 Carol Swain is the founding director of Veritas and a professor of political science and of law at Vanderbilt University. She is the author of Black Faces, Black Interests: The Representation of African Americans in Congress, named one of the seven outstanding academic books of 1994 by Library Choice Journal; received the 1994 Woodrow Wilson prize for the best book published in the U.S. on government, politics or international affairs; won the Hardeman Prize for best scholarly work on Congress (1994-1995); and was the co-winner of the Key Award for the best book published on southern politics. She received a B.A. from Roanoke College, M.A. from Virginia Polytechnic & State University, Ph.D. from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, and MSL from Yale University. She has recently authored The New White Nationalism in America: Its Challenge to Integration, and is Director of the Veritas Institute for Racial Justice and Reconciliation. Her articles appear in various publications, including op-eds in The New York Times, Wall Street Journal and The Chronicle of Higher Education. She has lectured widely across the country on issues ranging from congressional redistricting to the future of affirmative action programs, and appeared on ABC News, Fox News Live, PBS's Ben Wattenburg's Think Tank, NPR's Here & Now, NPR's The Connection, and NPR's Morning Edition.

 Daniel Tichenor, associate professor of political science at Rutgers University and the Eagleton Institute of Politics, is an affiliate faculty member of the Center for Migration and Development at Princeton University and the Center for Comparative Immigration Studies at the University of California, San Diego. He has been a research fellow or visiting scholar at the Brookings Institution, Leipzig University, Princeton University's Woodrow Wilson School, and the

John F. Kennedy Library. He received a B.A. from Earlham College and Ph.D. from Brandeis University. His recent book, Dividing Lines: The Politics of Immigration Control in America (2002), won the American Political Science Association's 2003 Gladys M. Kammerer Award for the best book in American national policy. He also received the Jack Walker Prize and Mary Parker Follet Award for his work on interest groups and social movements in American political development. His forthcoming book is Abiding Interests: Mobilization and Bias in the Washington Lobbying Community (Cambridge University Press).

 Charles Westoff is professor of demographic studies and sociology, emeritus at Princeton University. He holds a Ph.D. from the University of Pennsylvania. His interests include population policy, comparative fertility in developing countries, and fertility surveys. He is a senior demographic advisor to the Demographic and Health Surveys and a member of the boards of the Population Resource Center and The Alan Guttmacher Institute. Professor Westoff recently presented a review of the history of mass media and reproductive behavior at Johns Hopkins University, lectured at the University of North Carolina, and participated in a Congressional briefing on abortion and contraception.