Spill Kits

Do you know where the nearest spill kit is located? Each lab or work area should have access to sufficient quantities of absorbents or other types of materials to control a spill. EHS provides general use spill kits in all laboratory buildings and most other buildings where chemicals are stored or used. The EHS spill kit includes all of the materials needed to clean up spills of commonly used materials except hydrofluoric acid and mercury. Most kits are located near the elevator. After using the spill control materials in the EHS kits, please contact EHS at 258-5294 to request that the materials be replenished. If you use hydrofluoric acid, be sure to have HF compatible spill control materials, such as PowerSorb, available. If you use mercury, consider replacing with non-mercury alternatives. Otherwise, keep a supply of mercury spill materials (HgX, Mercury-Absorb, etc.) on hand. Mercury sponges are not very effective. For more information on cleaning up mercury spills, please see <http://web.princeton.edu/sites/ehs/chemwaste/mercury.htm>
